TIMELINE

1971 First issue published in January. The cover featured Shikuan (Shihwan) ware that dates back to the Ming dynasty (1368–1644). From launch the magazine included in-depth articles, impressive images and auction news.

1971–1974 Tuyet Nguyet and Stephen Markbreiter wrote articles on Chinese culture and the arts, including the Palace Museum in Beijing. At that time few people travelled to China and the articles with their plans, maps and extensive photographs were very well received.

1973 Tuyet Nguyet encouraged Sotheby’s to establish a Hong Kong office and auctions, which it did.

Mid 1970s Arts of Asia began to set up a global presence with growing subscriber numbers, especially from the United States, Australia, Europe and Japan. Also, more museums wanted to have their collections featured in the magazine. To date, the magazine has featured more than 150 museums.

1980 Tuyet Nguyet went to New York to advise James Lally of Sotheby’s to bring modern Chinese paintings to Hong Kong. Sotheby’s first sale of modern Chinese paintings took place on May 28th at City Hall.

1984 At the urging of serious collectors and dealers, Tuyet Nguyet went to London on behalf of Arts of Asia to see Christie’s and convinced the auction house to establish a presence in Hong Kong. It held its first auction in January 1986.

1986 Chinese painting in the imperial age was the cover story for the November-December issue—significant because it presented an international readership for the first time articles written by Chinese scholars and experts that had been translated into English.

1991 The January-February issue marked the 20th Anniversary of Arts of Asia. The magazine included an extensive index of subjects published over the previous 20 years.

2000 30th Anniversary.

2004 Special 200th edition, featuring a retrospective of achievements, important photographs and interviews.

2006 The magazine is available in 93 countries.

May 2006 Arts of Asia relocates to a larger office that enables the opening of the Arts of Asia Study Centre and Library.

2009 November-December 2008 issue received the Gold Prize for Magazine category at the 2009 China Print Awards.
